R. of the social supremacy of Franklin ave-Guggenheim and Mrs. S. R. Guggenheim, came down from the north vesterday morning and registered at the Knutsford. During the forenoon Mr. Eccles, who is vice president of the American Smelting & Refining company and general traffic manager of the various Guggenheim companies, piloted S. R. Guggenheim, Mrs. Guggenheim and party to the new smelting works at Garfield, where the better part of the day was spent in noting what had been accomplished. Daniel Guggenheim remained in the city looking after business matters until about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Then, in company with General Manager C. W. Whitley of the local plants, he was whirled out to the Garfield works in an auto. Being particularly anxlous to get away for New York last evening Mr. Guggenheim did not have a world of time in which to discuss matters connected with the many enterprises of magnitude with which he is identified.

It is just about a year since Mr. Gug-Guggenheim and Mrs. S. R. Guggenheim, nue was still undecided when court

Mrs. Boss disdained to notice these remarks save by a very superior sneer as she threw a scornful glance at the ebon features of the female orator.

Judge Diehl exercised much judicial tact in his decision by which he found Mrs. Paxton guilty of calling Mrs. Boss genhelm was last here. At that time the building of the great smelting works at Garfield had not been commenced. Before leaving for the plant he expressed himself as being much elated at the splendid manner in which the building of the plant had been carried through and, when he had been at the works and had seen the furnaces at work, he was sure his satisfaction would prove boundless. In the building of the new works Mr. Guggenhelm said it had been the aim to meet the demands of this rapidly growing country and the policy would be always to consider the welfare of the producer and foster the growth of the mining industry wherever and whenever possible. He regretted not having time to discuss in greater detail the wonderful growth of both the mining and smelting industries in this region and he hoped to be able to come out this way again before long and spend more time.

Alaska is Great Country.

Alaska Is Great Country.

"Alaska is a wonderfully rich and resourceful country—a rich country without population." said Mr. Guggenheim, "I have been up there to look into interests of ours and check up reports that had previously been submitted by our engineers. We went through as far as Dawson and had a very comfortable and enjoyable trip. We expect to take a hand in the development of the country and the building of railroads now under way and contemplated will aid materially in shaping out plans. Whether we build railroads or not, there is no question but what they will be built. There is plenty of money available for such work and any number of men willing to go at it. I cannot say where these roads should be built nor where we may go into mining. It would not be fair to go into details at this time. But to make lode mining successful in Alaska machinery must be employed. In order to get mostly. Alaska is a wonderfully rich and re-

Mr. Guggenheim was able to see in Alaska that the day was at hand when the hydraulic giant must replace the sluice box; where the country which had been a poor man's paradise offered practically limitless opportunity for the profitable employment of big capital. That the results of his investigations in the northern country will result in big enterprises being launched there is conclusive from the enthusiastic manner in which he discusses the country's resources and, while he edged around its resources and the country days vesterday of the police, was given thirty days vesterday of the police, was given thirty days vesterday of the police, was given thirty days vesterday of the complaint of Walter M. yesterday to try his fellow jurist, Charles F. Durand, on a charge of threatening to kill Editor J. S. Barlow of the Murray Eagle. Shortly after the appointed hour Justice Durand, the defendant, strolled into court in his shirt sleeves and without his hat, informed the man on the bench that the lawyers on both sides had agreed to continue the case until next Tuesday at 2 o'clock. Justice Holm accordingly adjourned court until that time.

When the court adjourned two newspaper men present approached Justice Durand and asked him who his lawyer was. He replied that he was Judge C. C. Dey of the firm of Dey & Hoppaugh, a firm which does much business for Francis G. Luke, the next friend of Justice Durand. The newspaper men asked Justice Durand if he was willing to make a statement of his side of the case. The jurist replied in the negative, intimating that he had a poor opinion of the Salt Lake newspapers.

While this conversation was going on that he had a poor Lake newspapers.

While this conversation was going on Attorney David M. Haigh of Murray, a young man much impressed with the importance of his connection with the case, came up and "butted in." "I'm the judge's lawyer," he declared, an he ain't got no statement to make."
"Are you Judge Dey?" asked one of the reporters.

"Naw, I ain't no guy; you can bet on that," replied Counsellor Haigh.
"I said 'Judge Dey,'" returned the reporter gently. "Are you associated with him in the conduct of Justice Durand's defense?"

"That ain't none of your business," said Mr. Haigh, who evidently was trying to create the impression that he was looking for trouble. "I'm Judge Durand's lawyer; that's enough. The reporters departed before the fero-cious limb of the law had a chance to annihilate them, and fortunately caught a car just then for Salt Lake. Mr. Haigh, it is said, will carry Judge Dey's lawbooks into court the day of the trial.

The board of education met yesterday and discussed the problem of providing accommodations for the overflow of pupils from the Sumner and Grant schools The school census which was recently completed showed that in these districts there were a large number of school children who could not be accommodated in their respective districts.
